- As far as I know, Tom has never been able to drive properly. What should she inherit ?
- By the way, we're still waiting for the supplier's answer about the Dutch goods.
- I don't think they'll be able to phone until they have signed the agreement. He('s) lost almost/nearly everything.
- How much would we have to pay if we wanted to change this/that farm into a hotel ? What would have happened ?
- James is said to be the best wine waiter in London. I've been told Lucy hasn't registered yet (Lucy still hasn't registered).
- I wish I had as much money as your friends had, but I would by no means change houses !
- Mrs. Lawson gave us a lift every other time, that's to say every time Pat took the Audi.
- I'd known Sally for more than 5 years when she married a banker from Liverpool six months ago.
- When we've finished repairing your friends' van, we'll have deserved a two days' rest.
- I was told (I've been told) James only taught sciences for three years and a half (James taught sciences for only three years and a half), but I no longer know where (but I don't know where any more/longer).

- How much do you think they'll charge us ? How did you manage to have a hotel built in Hull ?
- I don't think Christopher has made up his mind yet (has made a decision yet) as far as next month's orders are concerned (as regards // about next month's orders).
- Contrary to what had been previously said (to what had been said before), 20% of the secretaries had to be dismissed last year.
- I can't help telling the truth every time I'm interviewed/asked about the Belfast treaty.
- If the phone box hadn't been out of order, I wouldn't have had to hitch-hike back home (to go back home hitch-hiking).
- I'm afraid I can't get you through to Mrs. Smith. She hasn't worked with us any longer/more since autumn 1994.
- According to these/those experts, the government isn't in a position to invest twice as much money as (It/they did) last year.
- That policy proved all the more necessary as there were already more than three million unemployed people.
- You should have apologized to the Paxtons for forgetting to send them a postcard from Hawaii.
- The management is ready/prepared to negotiate with the trade unions at last, provided the meeting is held in Paris.

3

- According to Jack, I should have had my latest article translated before attending the lecture in Madrid.
- They'll have to agree one way or another, even though/if they have never trusted each other.
- I wish I had understood yesterday's play without having to ask Bill about the plot every five minutes.
- Stan needn't worry so much every/each time he happens to be faced with the slightest obstacle (every time he happens to face the slightest obstacle).
- Thousands of disappointed clients/customers have been complaining since William was dismissed, if his wife is to believe (is to be believed).
- Can you explain that to me again ? How long has he been telling you a lie about his studies ?
- After making a decision, you should avoid changing your mind without asking for your boss's agreement.
- I haven't heard from the Smiths for 3 years, but I'll be delighted to see them at Paul's on Saturday night.
- Diana Barlow can't help cheating every time she must sit for an important exam (every time she must take an important exam).
- Why are you late every other time ? I'd better (I'd rather) give you a lift next time.
